

Kids in Cages: The Heartbreaking Truth About Family Separation at the Border

In June of 2018, the Trump administration began implementing a policy of "zero tolerance" at the U.S.-Mexico border. This policy resulted in the separation of thousands of children from their parents at the border. These children were held in cages and other detention facilities, often for weeks or even months. They were denied basic necessities like soap, toothbrushes, and adequate food. Many of them were traumatized by the experience.
