Unveiling a Paradigm Shift in Indigenous Academia

Embark on a groundbreaking exploration of Indigenous studies with 'New Directions in Indigenous Studies.' This comprehensive book offers a fresh perspective and critical insights into the field, challenging conventional approaches and opening up new avenues for research.

Edited by renowned Indigenous scholars Dr. Marie Battiste, Dr. James Wilson, and Dr. Andrea Bear Nicholas, 'New Directions in Indigenous Studies' gathers a diverse group of Indigenous and non-Indigenous contributors who provide a multifaceted examination of the field.

Through twenty-one thought-provoking chapters, the book delves into:

- Decolonizing research methodologies and epistemologies

- Indigenizing post-secondary education
- Revitalizing Indigenous languages
- Addressing the intergenerational impacts of colonialism
- Promoting Indigenous resurgence and self-determination

With its interdisciplinary approach, 'New Directions in Indigenous Studies' transcends traditional boundaries and offers a holistic understanding of Indigenous studies. The book draws upon multiple disciplines, including:

- Anthropology
- Education
- History
- Law
- Political science
- Sociology

This groundbreaking work is essential reading for students, scholars, and practitioners in Indigenous studies, as well as anyone seeking a deeper understanding of the complex and evolving field. 'New Directions in Indigenous Studies' provides a roadmap for future research and action, challenging readers to critically engage with the concepts and practices of Indigenous studies.

Testimonials

"A profound and necessary intervention in the field of Indigenous studies. This book presents a transformative vision for decolonizing research and education, and empowers Indigenous scholars to assert their intellectual sovereignty." - Dr. Linda Tuhiwai Smith, University of Waikato, New Zealand

"An indispensable resource for anyone seeking to understand the current state and future directions of Indigenous studies. This book offers a thought-provoking exploration of key issues facing Indigenous peoples and provides a much-needed space for Indigenous voices to be heard." - Dr. Eve Tuck, University of Toronto, Canada
