What is legal guardianship?

Legal guardianship is a court Free Download that gives one person the legal authority to make decisions for another person who is considered to be incapacitated.

Incapacitated means that the person is unable to make their own decisions due to a mental or physical disability.

There are two types of legal guardianship: plenary guardianship and limited guardianship.

- Plenary guardianship gives the guardian complete control over the ward's person and estate.
- Limited guardianship gives the guardian only limited authority over the ward's person or estate.

Why is legal guardianship a problem?

Legal guardianship can be a problem for a number of reasons.

- Guardians can abuse their power. Guardians can use their power to control the ward's finances, make decisions about the ward's medical care, and even restrict the ward's contact with family and friends.
- Guardianships can be expensive. The cost of a guardianship can be significant, especially if the guardianship is long-term.
- Guardianships can be traumatic. The process of being placed under a guardianship can be traumatic for the ward and their family.

How can I protect my loved one from legal guardianship?

There are a number of things you can do to protect your loved one from legal guardianship.

- Create a will or trust. A will or trust can specify who you want to be your guardian if you become incapacitated.

- Get a power of attorney. A power of attorney gives someone the legal authority to make decisions for you if you become incapacitated.
- Talk to your loved one about their wishes. Make sure you know what your loved one's wishes are regarding guardianship.

What should I do if my loved one is already under a guardianship?

If your loved one is already under a guardianship, there are a number of things you can do to protect them.

- Monitor the guardian's activities. Make sure the guardian is acting in your loved one's best interests.
- Report any abuse or neglect to the court. If you believe the guardian is abusing or neglecting your loved one, you should report it to the court.
- File a petition to terminate the guardianship. If you believe the guardianship is no longer necessary, you can file a petition to terminate the guardianship.
