Labor Market Transformation

The labor market in Bangladesh has undergone a significant shift from a predominantly agricultural economy to a more diversified one, characterized by the growth of manufacturing, services, and export sectors. The book analyzes wage determination mechanisms, exploring the role of skills, education, and labor market institutions. It examines the distribution of income across different income groups and regions, highlighting the challenges and disparities in income equality.

The analysis sheds light on the factors contributing to wage gaps, such as gender discrimination, regional disparities, and skill mismatches. It also assesses the impact of minimum wage policies and other labor market interventions on wage levels and income distribution.
